

phly high

PHOENIX PHANATICS PUMP UP THE GAMES

It's no secret that most Elon students don't come to Burlington for the crazy sports scene. But while this may be the case for some students, others are determined to make a name for Phoenix pride. Tyson Glover '17, president of Phoenix Phanatics, knew that he wanted to make a name for the student sections at Elon sporting events once again.

"I felt that this was one aspect of my Elon experience that I was missing after my junior year," said Glover. "I re-founded the [Phoenix Phanatics] and have spent most of my time getting other passionate fans to join the Phanatics. I hope that years from now I can come back to homecoming and see our student section still getting loud and proud!"

Glover, along with other dedicated Phoenix fans, hopes that the organization can inspire students across campus to come out to games in the coming years and show more pride than ever.

"The Phoenix Phanatics is made up of the craziest supporters in the CAA," said Glover. "We are loud and proud members of the student cheering section at Elon University. We pride ourselves on standing for the entire game and for always being the biggest supporters of the Phoenix — no matter the score. It is important for students to have school spirit and support Elon both on, and off, the field."

LANE PRITCHARD

CAPTIONS: 1) Joshua Donnald and David Duncan cheer on the Elon football team at the Homecoming game (All photos by University Communications). 2) The Phoenix make an appearance in Alumni Gym. 3) Students fill the stadium to root for the home team. 4) Parents train kids at a young age to support the best team around. 5) Fans traveled the East Coast to cheer on the women's basketball team in the CAA Championships.