

What is LiNC-IT?

LiNC-IT: Linking North Carolina with Innovative Talent helps recruit autistic early career professionals (including college students) for paid internships with employer partners. Many of these individuals have the skills and education employers need, but they can be overlooked in traditional hiring processes.

Who should apply to LiNC-IT?

Adults on the autism spectrum, including college students, who are seeking internships or employment may apply to LiNC-IT.

Five-step Process

1. Complete an application at linc-it.org.
2. You will be contacted by an autism-specific employment specialist to support you for job/internship identification and preparation.
3. If you do not already have a case open with Vocational Rehabilitation (VR), you will need to open a case. The funding for the autism-specific employment specialist is through VR.
4. Wait to be matched with a LiNC-IT partner company for an internship.
5. During the internship, the autism-specific employment specialist will help facilitate accommodations, employer education, co-worker relation support, etc.
